

Frank Brunckhorst

Frank attended Trinity School in New York City and spent high school summers at the Universite de Caen in Caen, France, and at Choate in Wallingford, Connecticut. He began his time at Carnegie Mellon as a student in Dietrich College but transferred to the Tepper School, where he pursued a B.S. degree in industrial management. He has been a board member, part owner, and former chairman of Boar's Head Provisions, which is owned and operated by members of the Brunckhorst family. He stepped down as chairman of the board in 2004 and devotes much of his time and effort to various nonprofit organizations. Frank has been a trustee of Carnegie Mellon University since 2005 and was named a life trustee in 2011. He serves on the Advancement and Educational Affairs and Enrollment Committees. He is a past member of the Heinz College Advisory Board. A native of New York, Frank currently resides in Sarasota.